A sufficient amount had been on the ground to make pretty good sleighing from Christmas until the last of January. The "January thaw" failed altogether, except that Saturday, the 29th, was somewhat warm and sloppy. The nex two or three days were cold and cloudy, and there was some sleet. The 2d of February, known as "Ground-Hog's Day," was a mixture of clear and cloudy, the cloudy predominating. That night, the wind shifted to the east, and all day Thursday bles ominously from that direction, bringing the express ion from almost every one, that we were "going to eatch it." Thursday night, it snowed slightly, the snow being almost in the nature of particles of hail. From that time until the next five or six days, the thermometer stood steadily about the freezing point, never marking more than two or three degrees above or below it. Friday was dark and dreary, but no fall of snow or rain, until about 9 o'clock at night. when a snow somewhat like that of the preceding night again set in, but somewhat more damp and slippery. But during the night, it turned to genuine

Here commences the record of the sleet. Satu day morning, the face of the earth was covered with a coat of ice, and the sleet still falling. It continued to fall, with scarcely any interruption, through the day, and at bed-time was still falling. The trees were heavily weighted with ice, and were bending under the burden. Toward midnight, the trees began to succumb to the pressure. From that time, continuously all through the night, at very short intervals, a sharp, brief snap would be heard, and then a ringing, metallic sound, as limb after limb purted from the trees, and fell, with its izy load, upon the izy earth beneath. As hours passed, these reports became louder and more frequent, as the large limbs gave way under a pressure that had at first overcome only the smaller twigs. The branches were bent and bowed to the ground, and so laden with ice and interlaced, that one could not make his way through. It reminded us of pictures we have seen of Southern swamps, with the branches of the trees bent down and interfaced, and covered with vines and messes.

The destruction in Doniphan County will be many thousands of dollars. Shade and ornamental trees, and groves planted by farmers, are fearfully damaged. Soft, brittle timber, like cuttonwoods and soft maples, suffered the most. Fruit trees, being tougher and more elastic, received much less damag than was feared. Besides, they are so low-branched that the ley tops of the branches reached and rested on the ground before they could break, and thus the tension was relieved. VAN BUSKIRK & BRECKENRIDGE AT STRICTLY PRIME COST!

FEBRUARY

This is usually a dull month, and only those who are not afraid to offer goods at extrordinary inducements, can expect much trade. We do not claim to be selling at cost, closing out, cleaning up, overstocked with this, that, &c., &c .- all this is getting stale; the people are surfeited with such trash. We want trade, and agree to meet any and all competition in our line. We offer all our goods [many of them at prices that high-priced houses would think ruinous] at figures that will sell them, and keep trade rushing.

MARCH

Next month, we propose to Fill our House Full, and with Goods bought for Cash only. Our customers shall all be used alike, with uniformly low prices, good goods, and latest and choicest styles,
